Conclusions

- There are striking partisan differences in satisfaction with candidate choices in presidential and senate primaries.
- Hillary Clinton and Bernie Sanders are in a tight race in the Democratic presidential primary; both lead Donald Trump in potential November matchups.
- Democrats Kamala Harris and Loretta Sanchez lead the top-two U.S. Senate primary; nearly one in three are undecided.
- Half of Californians view the Democratic Party favorably; one in four view the Republican Party favorably.
- Fewer than half see the state budget as a big problem, but a partisan divide persists.
- Californians and likely voters favor extending the Proposition 30 income tax increase, increasing the cigarette tax, and legalizing marijuana.
