Mark Baldassare is president and CEO of the Public Policy Institute of California, where he also holds the Arjay and Frances Fearing Miller Chair in Public Policy and directs the PPIC Statewide Survey. Before assuming his current position, he was PPIC’s director of research. He has authored ten books, including The Coming Age of Direct Democracy: California’s Recall and Beyond. Before joining PPIC, he was a professor of urban and regional planning at the University of California, Irvine. He has conducted surveys for the Los Angeles Times, the San Francisco Chronicle, and the California Business Roundtable. He holds a Ph.D. in sociology from the University of California, Berkeley.

Diana S. Dooley is secretary of the California Health and Human Services Agency. She leads thirteen state departments and chairs Covered California. Before her appointment in 2010, she was president and CEO of the California Children’s Hospital Association. She moved into health care in 2000, when she left her private law practice to serve as Children’s Hospital Central California’s general counsel and vice president. She has served on the boards of directors of the UC Merced Foundation, Blood Source of Northern California, and the Maddy Institute at California State University, Fresno. She is also a past president of Planned Parenthood, the Visalia Chamber of Commerce, and the Central California Futures Institute. She holds a J.D. from San Joaquin College of Law and a bachelor’s degree from California State University, Fresno.

Sandra R. Hernández is president and CEO of the California HealthCare Foundation (CHCF). She is also an assistant clinical professor at the University of California, San Francisco, School of Medicine and maintains an active clinical practice at San Francisco General Hospital’s AIDS clinic. Before she joined CHCF in January 2014, she was CEO of the San Francisco Foundation for sixteen years. Previously, she was director of public health for the City and County of San Francisco. She serves on many boards and committees, including the boards of Blue Shield of California and the Lucile Packard Children’s Hospital. She co-chaired San Francisco’s Universal Healthcare Council, which designed Healthy San Francisco, an innovative health access program. She is a graduate of Yale University, the Tufts School of Medicine, and the John F. Kennedy School of Government at Harvard University.

Phil Isenberg is vice chair of the Delta Stewardship Council. He was elected to PPIC’s board of directors in 2013. During his long career in state and local government, he has served in the California Assembly, representing portions of Sacramento, Contra Costa, and San Joaquin Counties (1982–96); as mayor of Sacramento (1975–82); and on the Sacramento City Council (1971–74). More recently, he has chaired the California Marine Life Protection Act Blue Ribbon Task Force (2004–06) and the Delta Vision Blue Ribbon Task Force (2007–08). He has also run a private law practice and served as president of Isenberg-O’Haren Government Relations (2004-10). He holds a J.D. from the University of California, Berkeley, and a B.A. from California State University, Sacramento.

Mitchell H. Katz is director of the Los Angeles County Department of Health Services, the second-largest health system in the nation. He is also a primary care doctor at Edward R. Roybal Comprehensive Health Center. Before he assumed his current position, he served for thirteen years as director of the San Francisco Department of Public Health. He also served the department in a number of other positions, directing the AIDS Office and the Emergency Medical Services Agency. He holds an M.D. from Harvard Medical School.

PARTICIPANTS

Mark Baldassare is president and CEO of the Public Policy Institute of California, where he also holds the Arjay and Frances Fearing Miller Chair in Public Policy and directs the PPIC Statewide Survey. Before assuming his current position, he was PPIC’s director of research. He has authored ten books, including The Coming Age of Direct Democracy: California’s Recall and Beyond. Before joining PPIC, he was a professor of urban and regional planning at the University of California, Irvine. He has conducted surveys for the Los Angeles Times, the San Francisco Chronicle, and the California Business Roundtable. He holds a Ph.D. in sociology from the University of California, Berkeley.

Diana S. Dooley is secretary of the California Health and Human Services Agency. She leads thirteen state departments and chairs Covered California. Before her appointment in 2010, she was president and CEO of the California Children’s Hospital Association. She moved into health care in 2000, when she left her private law practice to serve as Children’s Hospital Central California’s general counsel and vice president. She has served on the boards of directors of the UC Merced Foundation, Blood Source of Northern California, and the Maddy Institute at California State University, Fresno. She is also a past president of Planned Parenthood, the Visalia Chamber of Commerce, and the Central California Futures Institute. She holds a J.D. from San Joaquin College of Law and a bachelor’s degree from California State University, Fresno.

Sandra R. Hernández is president and CEO of the California HealthCare Foundation (CHCF). She is also an assistant clinical professor at the University of California, San Francisco, School of Medicine and maintains an active clinical practice at San Francisco General Hospital’s AIDS clinic. Before she joined CHCF in January 2014, she was CEO of the San Francisco Foundation for sixteen years. Previously, she was director of public health for the City and County of San Francisco. She serves on many boards and committees, including the boards of Blue Shield of California and the Lucile Packard Children’s Hospital. She co-chaired San Francisco’s Universal Healthcare Council, which designed Healthy San Francisco, an innovative health access program. She is a graduate of Yale University, the Tufts School of Medicine, and the John F. Kennedy School of Government at Harvard University.

Phil Isenberg is vice chair of the Delta Stewardship Council. He was elected to PPIC’s board of directors in 2013. During his long career in state and local government, he has served in the California Assembly, representing portions of Sacramento, Contra Costa, and San Joaquin Counties (1982–96); as mayor of Sacramento (1975–82); and on the Sacramento City Council (1971–74). More recently, he has chaired the California Marine Life Protection Act Blue Ribbon Task Force (2004–06) and the Delta Vision Blue Ribbon Task Force (2007–08). He has also run a private law practice and served as president of Isenberg-O’Haren Government Relations (2004-10). He holds a J.D. from the University of California, Berkeley, and a B.A. from California State University, Sacramento.

Mitchell H. Katz is director of the Los Angeles County Department of Health Services, the second-largest health system in the nation. He is also a primary care doctor at Edward R. Roybal Comprehensive Health Center. Before he assumed his current position, he served for thirteen years as director of the San Francisco Department of Public Health. He also served the department in a number of other positions, directing the AIDS Office and the Emergency Medical Services Agency. He holds an M.D. from Harvard Medical School.