Kit Rebalsky is the production manager at the Public Policy Institute of California. She composes layouts and handles the production of many of the institute’s print and web publications. She also works on materials for PPIC events—including briefing slides and event signage—and develops text and graphics templates for use by research staff. Before joining PPIC, she was a senior production editor at Peachpit Press and Adobe Press, publishers of computer and trade books. She holds a BA in social science from the University of California, Berkeley.